UNDER DISPATCH

For Swatow, Amoy and Foochow.—Per Niphon on Sunday, the 2nd December next, at daylight.

The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 30, 1866.

VARIOUS stories have been current during the last few days about changes impending at the magistracy. The facts of the matter we understand to be these. In view of the approaching inauguration of the new Registration Ordinance, it has been held desirable by the government that Mr. Cyrus Smith should resume his proper functions as Registrar General. Mr. TONNOCHY who has been occupying this post during Mr. SMITH's term of service as Acting Police Magistrate, will continue his attention in future to his various duties as Coroner, Sheriff, and Marshal of the Admiralty Court, and Mr. SMITH will cease to sit on the bench. At the same time Mr. WHYTE has given notice of his desire to resign his appointment as Police Magistrate with a view to undertaking private practise at the bar. The magistracy therefore has to be recruited. Eventually it is to be presumed that Mr. MAY will return to his regular duties as Magistrate but the problem has been to arrange for the performance of public duties in the interim. The difficulty has been overcome by the appointment of Mr. F. W. M. CHELL as acting-Magistrate, Mr. WHYTE agreeing to continue as his colleague either until the return of Mr. MAY, or until the appointment of some other member of the Government as acting magistrate will leave him at liberty to quit the bench. That the bench will lose a great deal in losing Mr. WHYTE and Mr. SMITH is indisputable. Both these gentlemen have shown as magistrates that strong common sense united with keen intelligence so desirable in adjudicating arbitrarily on small cases, and their successors, will have some difficulty in reconciling the public to the change. Still it is manifest so far as Mr. SMITH is concerned that if the new Registration Ordinance is to be put in force, the Registrar's department has need of the highest abilities and most active industry at command while it is more than probable that Mr. WHYTE at the bar will achieve a position for himself which will prevent any well-wisher from regretting his resignation. On the other hand Mr. MERCHANT who is the only new Magistrate with whom we have at present to do, has shown remarkable versatility in many different departments of the public service, and it was the obvious course of the Government in its present dilemma to appeal for assistance to him. Should it be found possible to arrange the second magistrateship question before the return of Mr. MAY, Mr. WHYTE will retire from the bench at the close of the present year.

Alleged Libel.

Mr. N. B. Dennys, proprietor and publisher of the Evening Mail, newspaper, appeared yesterday before Mr. Tonnochy to answer a summons taken out against him by the Revd. W. Lobscheid, for having on the 24th and 25th of the present month published in the said paper certain scandalous libels to the detriment of complainant in the matter, and accusing him of being connected with certain criminal proceedings.

Mr. Gaskell, appeared for the defendant, and stated in the first place that on behalf of his client he acknowledged the articles referred to, as the matter complained of, but he wished His Worship to deal summarily with the case.

The magistrate did not think he could, for it proved, it was an indictable offence.

Mr. Gaskell thought he could, and referred to an Ordinance of 1865, which however was found not to be applicable to the case.

The Revd. William Lobscheid, being sworn, said: "I am a minister of the Establ shed Church of Prussia, I have summoned defendant for having published certain criminal libels against my character in the Evening Mail of Saturday the 24th inst., and further commenting on them to my prejudice in the Evening Mail of Monday the 26th inst. in this matter I have had blinded thrown in the issue of the 24th, is a leader commencing, "In the name of the Profs. Pigs," and in taking the whole I object more particularly to the passage commencing, "But the strangest matter connected with these pigs (chiefly sows.)" and ending, "If it were not that "Minister" stands for "representative" of His Never Mind who's Majesty's Government the word would suggest a coalition." In the issue of the 26th, the particular paragraph complained of commences, "We shall refrain from adding anything to the sufferings of the revd. gentleman," ending with the word "simpleton." I affirm that the libels were intended to apply to me, as many of my friends on reading the articles told me that no other person could be meant."

The Magistrate supposed then that Mr. Lobscheid felt agrieved at the tenor of these remarks.

The rev. gentleman who had a long written statement with him which he seemed very anxious to read, here commenced, "that he felt not only age ered but."

Mr. Gaskell said, "I should wish to ask your Worship, can we go into the rev. gentleman's feelings The Magistrate, "No," a timely not. Mr. Lobscheid is on oath and had better not state his reasons or feelings. It is for the court to decide whether the publication of some within the scope of a libel or not; you cannot be allowed to read that written statement as evidence."

Mr. Lobscheid.—"I must read this paper in defence of my character, I have and I have it."

"He Magistrate.—"I cannot permit it."

Mr. Lobscheid.—"But I must."

Mr. Gaskell objected strongly to the document being read.

The magistrate.—The paper must in the first place be handed into court and seen by me."

It was accordingly handed in, and after having been perused by the magistrate, he said:—This is merely an address to the court, not evidence at all, and I cannot receive it as such, you have already proved your charge, as the defendant admits the authenticity of the documents which you believe to be a libel and it is for the court to decide as to whether those documents really constitute a libel or not.

The reverend gentleman did not at all like giving up the idea of reading his written paper, but the Bench was inexorable, and Mr. Gaskell then commenced his cross examinat in.

Mr. Gaskell—Are you not agent for the Netherlands West Indian Emigration company?"

Mr. Lobscheid—"I hold power from the government to—"

Mr. Gaskell—"That is not my question, I ask are you an agent or that company?"

Mr. Lobscheid—"I hold powers."

The Magistrate.—"That is not the question Mr. Lobscheid, you must answer yes or no."

Mr. Lobscheid—"Not for people who take part in criminal proceedings."

The Magistrate—"Mr. Lobscheid, that is not an answer, and I cannot take it as such, are you the agent or not?"

Mr Lobscheid—"I hold power from the government to the supervision of these."

The Magistrate—"This question must be answered, Mr. Gaskell is entitled to it and it must be done, yes or no, are you the agent or not?"

Mr Lobscheid—"Well partly."

The Magistrate, that is not the question and I insist upon its being answered, otherwise, sorry as I should be to do so, if you do not at once answer this simple question yes or no, I must commit you for contempt of court, give the answer and you can afterwards make any explanation of it you think fit.

Mr. Lobscheid—"I am agent for the Netherlands West India Emigration Company, but have nothing to do with the collection of men, I have only to sign the contracts.

Mr. Gaskell—"Have you not signed papers and given them to other parties under you, authorising them to proceed to different districts on mainland of China and collect emigrants in your name?"

Mr. Lobscheid—"I have certai ly never done any such thing; if I gave my servant a letter that will assist him in his work, that is nothing.

Mr. Gaskell—"On a former occasion you were brought to this court charged with complicity in such an affair but acquitted."

Mr. Lobscheid—"I was, I was."

Mr Gaskell—"Now really, is there anything in these pig squeaking articles to damage your character."

Mr Lobscheid—"Yes, they would prevent me in case of sickness and having to return home from obtaining a living in the Established Church.

We live in a matter of fact age, in "Hard Times" of work and wages, with Mr. GRADGRIND's philosophy more or less dominant all over the civilised world, where benevolence blossoms forth in the shape of model schools and reformatories, and wickedness, losing all romance, is refered to the next sessions. In politics we are utilitarian and economical, loyalty replaces into conscientiousness in regard to beer and cabs at election time, and the restless antagonism to existing institutions which would once have led to exciting intrigues and dynastic feuds, is transformed into a passionate enthusiasm for a £6 franchise, or the redection of the duties on malt. But there is expunged from politics it must be confessed, what few institutions take root in a country, or it is only the most subtle and intellectual poetry which remains discernible in the public life of a land, where "sober suited freedom" reigns,—"where girt by friends or foes, a man may speak the thing he will." Our attention is absorbed by the sharemarket or the tightness of money, by the lo-s of the crops or the rate of discount, any pending is of low counts or speeches at public dinners, and the Government is another word for the state of public opinion about the reform bill or the income tax. The QUEEN grows more and more, as years go by, a name in the Court Circular, the Crown is rapidly becoming a legal expression, followed by verses JONES or SMITH, the army is a profession where money is sunk, and the navy is a service to be sometimes. Parliament is the bar, London club to which a man has himself carried by agents through very muddy thoroughfares. In religion, the next generation to a living is always for sale, and is of course worth a good deal more if the incumbent is, as the advertisements sometimes say "turned sixty and a very bad life," bishoprics are achieved by elderly gentlemen who write learned essays on a Greek particle, and philosophers, as the phrase nicely runs, assume the certainty of scientific theories under which the "hypothesis of a God" is "redundant." The common place has been canonised, and if the Christian Era where to come again the whole affair would be relegated to a select committee of the House. Civilisation, however does not go ahead quite so fast in some countries as in others and here and there is still something of the old colour and magnificence of life remaining. In Russia the refinements of the highest culture, the conquests of the most advanced science have been domesticated as thoroughly as in London or Paris. St. Petersburg is an artificial city created by scientific skill on a site as ill adapted for building, as nature could render it. The whole town is a sort of lake, floating on the soft mud of the Neva swamps, the splendid palaces and vast streets and squares, the pomp and glitter of life in the Muscovite capital are all the work of the most modern art which the nineteenth century can furnish. Russia, so far as the upper class is concerned is behind no country or people, her luxuries and pleasures and modes of passing the time are absolutely in all respects up to the level of the day, but she is a great barbaric power still and the middle ages have within her dominions been prolonged till they have touched the present year of grace. We have in Russia every now and then, a glimpse of life which belongs to a past century. That is not the question Mr. Lobscheid, you must answer yes or no.

Mr. Lobscheid—"Not for people who take part in criminal proceedings."

The Magistrate—"Mr. Lobscheid, that is not an answer, and I cannot take it as such, are you the agent or not?"

Mr Lobscheid—"I hold power from the government to the supervision of these."

The Magistrate—"This question must be answered, Mr. Gaskell is entitled to it and it must be done, yes or no, are you the agent or not?"

Mr Lobscheid—"Well partly."

The Magistrate, that is not the question and I insist upon its being answered, otherwise, sorry as I should be to do so, if you do not at once answer this simple question yes or no, I must commit you for contempt of court, give the answer and you can afterwards make any explanation of it you think fit.

Mr. Lobscheid—"I am agent for the Netherlands West India Emigration Company, but have nothing to do with the collection of men, I have only to sign the contracts.

Mr. Gaskell—"Have you not signed papers and given them to other parties under you, authorising them to proceed to different districts on mainland of China and collect emigrants in your name?"

Mr. Lobscheid—"I have certai ly never done any such thing; if I gave my servant a letter that will assist him in his work, that is nothing.

Mr. Gaskell—"On a former occasion you were brought to this court charged with complicity in such an affair but acquitted."

Mr. Lobscheid—"I was, I was."

Mr Gaskell—"Now really, is there anything in these pig squeaking articles to damage your character."

Mr Lobscheid—"Yes, they would prevent me in case of sickness and having to return home from obtaining a living in the Established Church.

Mr Gaskell—"And what harm will that trial on a criminal charge do you?"

Mr. Lobscheid.—"None at all.—I was acquitted."

Mr. Gaskell had no more questions but wished to make a few remarks.

The magistrate said that if Mr. Lobscheid wished to call any witness he was quite at liberty to do so, but it was quite unusual, defendant had opened to the expressions complained of.

Mr. Gaskell, reminded by his client, wished to ask one more question, which being allowed, he said.

Do you not receive a percentage on every coolie shipped?

Mr. Lobscheid.—"Not always. I have never been regularly paid."

Mr. Gaskell—egged on by his client wished for yet another question, which was not allowed, the magistrate not liking to see a client "coaching" his counsel in court.

Mr. Lobscheid wished to bring forward witnesses to prove that they should have picked him out to be the person alluded to in the article complained of.

The Magistrate thought this would be hardly worth while as this could not be taken as evidence, it was only a matter of opinion and the opposite side might bring a dozen witnesses who would say they thought some one else was meant.

Mr. Gaskell.—"It has not even been denied yet but that he was the person meant.

The magistrate informed Mr. Lobscheid that as he was not represented by any professional gentleman, he was now at liberty to make what ever statement he might think proper but such was not evidence, but merely an address to the court.

Mr Lobscheid who appeared to be very unwilling to leave the witness box, wished to make his statement on oath.

The magistrate told him that it was quite impossible that such a thing could be done, but if he would come down from the witness box he would be most happy to hear any statements he wished to make, with some reluctance the rev. gentleman complied, and stated as follows:—

That on hearing an article had been published which was calculated to do him considerable injury he obtained and read it, and found the gist to be such as in case of his returning home through sickness or any other cause, it would prevent him from obtaining employment from the Consistory of the Established Prussian Church, thereby entailing great hardship on himself and family, and on these grounds he applied to the Government of this colony for protection.

The magistrate said that he would take the papers and read them carefully and give his opinion as to whether a libel had actually been committed or not.

Mr Gaskell apprehended that the alleged libel contained nothing but a perfectly fair and legitimate criticism on a work which had previously appeared before the court, and if any injury had been done to complainant, his client was sorry for it, but he considered that it was nothing more than a fair newspaper criticism. Mr. Lobscheid's name was not mentioned at all in the paper of the 24th, and in the one of the 26th the comment is on the article of the 24th, which appeared in the Mercury, which fixed the cap on to Mr. Lobscheid's head. The word "minister" did not apply only to minister of the Gospel but might mean "minister plenipotentiary or a representative of the Sovereign. The learned gentleman thought that Mr. Lobscheid been acting legitimately as he said he had, it would be a very hard thing for his government to punish him, a minister of the Gospel for doing his duty, he could not think any government would act in such an unfair manner. In this case he contended that the word "minister" as used in the paragraph alluded to did not mean minister of the Gospel, and even whatever it might allude to, he should allege in justification that it was published for the public good. Everyone was aware what a disgrace and blot on society was this coolie emigration and he thought for the welfare of society at large that any one connected with, or supposed to be connected with the trade, was fair game for publicity. In this case he thought that for his own sake Mr. Lobscheid has better keep quiet on this matter, should the case be taken before a higher court, they would plead justification, plead public welfare, a variety of things would come out, and should Mr. Lobscheid's counsel fail to persuade a jury of the libel he would be in a far worse position than he was at present, besides the whole affair would cost a deal of money and he did not think even that supposing Mr. Lobscheid did get a verdict, which the learned gentleman very much doubted, he would certainly get no damages except those of a most trivial nature. He considered that there was considerable animus in this matter as Mr. Lobscheid had previously brought a similar charge against the defendant, which he had failed to substantiate and he seemed to forget that in this matter he had blinded thrown in the hatchet to a great extent as he is continually writing publicly on the subject, and so laying himself open to be attacked.

Mr. Lobscheid wished to speak in his own defence.

The magistrate said that it was impossible to hear him, he had already been allowed every privilege that could be granted to a court of law.

Mr. Lobscheid.—"Then I must request your Worship to postpone the case until I can obtain legal advice.

The magistrate.—"That is impossible—the case has already been postponed once and I will give judgment on Monday next." Should you then be dissatisfied with my judgement whatever it may be you have then the option of appealing against it."

Mr. Gaskell hoped that should His Worship not think fit to dismiss the summons he would deal summarily with the case.

Police Intelligence, November 29th.

BEFORE J. C. WHYTE Esq.

John Phillips, a native of Curacao, W. I. was charged with being drunk and incapable in Lascar Row.

P. C. 339, deposed to arresting him in Lascar Row at midnight last night, lying asleep in the street.

Prisoner said he was paid off yesterday from the Alacia and was robbed of all his money. Under these circumstances he was dismissed with a caution not to come up to court again.

A DOMESTIC CASE.

Nam-chu-sung, the informer by whose means the coining dens were brought to light, who is a servant employed by detective P. C. Brown, was charged with being in unlawful possession of a jacket the property of a duster named Chu-afat, alleged to have been taken from a house in the hands of the police and which had been left thereby the owner some days ago on account of the heat.

It was a remanded case and one of a very peculiar nature, considering how much depends on this witness in the coining cases, and that Eu-aloy late chief int-rpreter at the police court appears to be mysteriously connected with both these cases.

Tung-shu, is a tailor living in West street, next door to prosecutor, also knows the doctor Chu-afat, made a white suit for him last week, a dark colored garment of broad cloth, lined, not having quite enough stuff he had to put in a remnant, the jacket produced is the one he made for Chu-afat.

The evidence of Chu-afat, the owner, and another neighbour were also taken as to ownership of the jacket, which exactly tallied with that of the tailor so that the magistrate had no hesitation but to believe the evidence, of the three witnesses, at the same time there was not sufficient proof as to prima facie being the actual thief, but he should convict him of unlawful possession which was at itself a heavy crime against one employed in the position of prisoner, he should therefore fine him $40 or in default commit him to gaol for three months with hard labor.

UNLAWFUL POSSESSION.

Tong-ayat, carpenter, Wanchi, was charged with being in unlawful possession of a roll of sheet lead, value about $3, for the possession of which he could give no reasonable account.

P. C. 108, stated that last evening on about seven o'clock he arrested prisoner in Wanchi with the lead produced rolled up under his arm, on being asked how he came by it he said it had been given him by a shopkeeper, but he could not point out the individual, so witness arrested him on suspicion.

He now stated that the lead had been given him by a carpenter a friend of his, but as this person was not forthcoming, prisoner was sent to gaol for one month with hard labour.

An individual living in Queen's Road West, was charged with obstruction of the public thoroughfare, by having pigs confined in a pen on the side path; he admitted the pigs, and did not seem to see any particular harm in it but on the contrary, to be rather amused, he was told however that the pathway was for the public and not to keep pigs on, and prisoner's face became rather elongated when informed that he was fined $5.

THE EMBEZZLEMENT ON BOARD THE "SEA SERPENT"

D. Crawley, third mate, and Samuel Deane, late of the American ship Sea Serpent, were brought up on this charge, remanded from the 20th inst.

George W. Seaman, stated that the second prisoner was formerly on board the Sea Serpent, having shipped in San Francisco, witness knew him by the name of "Fred," nothing else. About twenty days ago, witness saw him pass a bar of copper nails up out of the fore hold and put them into a boat alongside, it was between ten and eleven o'clock at night and witness was on watch, he was afraid to stop him as he always carried a knife and witness was afraid of his life, he informed the captain of this soon after the second prisoner ran away from the ship.

Harris, another seaman on board the Sea Serpent, knows second prisoner by the name of Fred Warren; saw him take two bags of nails about twenty days ago from out of the fore hold and lower them into a boat over the bows, prisoner also told witness on one occasion that he had sold a brass stanchion from the gangway; there were twelve hands on board the vessel altogether, and witness never saw any ill treatment on board. When the communication about the brass stanchion, was made to witness, he was painting with him over the side, prisoner told him about it and showed some money which he said he had received for it, and gave witness fifty cents to buy some liquor.

William Davis, another witness, knows the second prisoner by the name of Frederick Warren, saw prisoner put something in the fore castle, witness saw him assisting the first prisoner to take some bags of nails out of the hold, which he lowered into a boat over the bows. About 17 or 18 days ago he also sold witness that he had taken away the copper and sold it.

Captain Wilmer stated that his cargo was now all discharged and he found 400 lbs of old copper and nails were missing, the value is about $50, also a few keys were lost, worth $50 in all—shore, as well as a new main royal worth $95, and a brass gangway stanchi n worth $20.

The magistrate told prisoners that they were brought up on a very serious charge and he could not help it in duty to himself, the case for trial before a jury, after the usual caution prisoners were fully committed for trial at the next criminal sessions of the Supreme Court.

THE DIAMOND ROBBERY CASE

Ross Maria, Tong-achin, chair coolie, and Ong-shun, servant, all employed by Mrs. Edecin Thomas, were charged with being concerned in the robbery of a diamond ring from their mistress' residence in Aberdeen Street on the 18th instant. The case was resumed from the 22nd instant.

Wong-acho, constable interpreter at the Central Station went yesterday with prosecutrix to five pawnbrokers shops to search for a diamond ring, in one of them, Mr. Chun Sing-shop, he found the ring now produced which was identified by prosecutrix as her property, he also arrested the two last prisoners the second carrying the ladies chair and the third in her house.

Chee-ako, master of the Chun Sing-shop, had pawned the ring for $22, 20 witness is sure it was him, as he was particular in asking how he came by such a ring, and he stated that he had been sent by his mistress who was short of money to pawn it.

The magistrate stated that he should like to punish the witness for unlawful possession, as he must know that a coolie like that could have no business with a diamond ring, but the consideration was that he would certainly lose his $22.20 and he should report the case to the registrar general with a view of having the license taken away, as such people as him were only receivers of stolen goods.

Edecin Thomas, stated that she recognised the ring now in court as her property, the second prisoner was her chair coolie and the third small.

Prisoners were duly committed for trial at the Supreme Court and the usual caution administered to them.

The first prisoner stated that she had never seen the ring in her mistress' house and knew nothing of it, and the second added that having been in the house for three years, she should give a thought to the animal. Nevertheless, the evening before last, the clerk's wife, the old mistress of Blanchet, heard a scraping at the door, and on opening it, she was astonished to recognise the faithful animal, which gambolled round her and filled the house with his joyous barking. It is supposed that having saved himself at the time of his wreck by swimming, he contrived to get on board some vessel to Havre which was proceeding from Réunion to Europe. How he found his way home is inexplicable."

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Thursday Evening.

No better argument perhaps is to be found in favor of direct communication between this port and Suez, or, putting it another way, of making Hongkong the head quarters of the steam communication on this side the Isthmus—than is given by a comparison of the quantities of silk and other freight going forward this mail by the two lines, the Messageries, and the P & O Company, the former going direct from here to Suez, and the latter connecting at Galle with the main line from Calcutta and there trans-shipping the cargo. It would appear from the figures thus presented that shippers are beginning to appreciate the advantages of avoiding a too frequent handling of their goods, as well as the hazardous and often times dangerous trans-shipping that has to be made by the P. & O. steamers whereby the packages such as silk and silk worms eggs is always liable to be more or less damaged.

The business of the French line has thus been gradually increasing until in the present instance the Messageries were obliged to despatch an extra supplementary steamer in order to accommodate all the freight that was offered. The large quantity of silk and silk worms eggs that has thus gone forward by the two steamers of the 4th proximo will realize it is stated nearly $30,000 of freight money. Commercially speaking this is a matter of no small importance, more especially when the value of such a cargo as that going forward to-day by the Dupleix is taken into consideration, and, unless the P & O. company change the present organization of their lines on this side the Isthmus they must expect to find that those who offer the best advantages for a safe and secure transit, will monopolize the freight traffic.

The opium market has been almost stationary to-day, and a very small amount of business has been in progress. The principle transactions have been in Malwa, and good drug appears to be rather scarce, there being few sellers. The closing quotations are $690 for Patna, $765 Benares, and $775 to $780 for Malwa. There has been an improved demand to-day for yellow Goods, but the transactions are still meagre. Sales are reported to-day of about 250 Grey Shirtings at $3.80 and $3.95 and 3000 pieces 7lb T-Cloths at $3.05 and $3.10 The Cotton market is without any movement and the quotations are almost nominal, the only sales are noted of 250 bales Bengal at $21¾ to $22. There is no change in Rice and small quantities continue to change hands at former prices. Sales to-day embrace about 6000 piculs. There is no change in the share market. Hardly any business in progress in Exchange, Bullion is freely offered at former rates.

The Eastern Question.

This Question—which means the future extension of the west European Empire, counterbalanced perhaps by the aggrandizement of other ambitious Powers—seems likely, within a few years or months, to excite still further the peace of Europe. The disturbances which are supposed to indicate general discontent among the subjects of the Porte exhibit in themselves a chronic and customary character. Half-civilized dependencies of a semi-barbarous Government are easily provoked by local slenderness to insurrection. The Greeks who profess Christianity are the natural enemies of their Mahometan contrymen, and they have probably frequent reason to complain of the administration of Turkish officers. On the mainland of Asia, the Druses, who are neither Turks nor Mahometans, are engaged in one of their habitual feuds with the Maronites; and far off there are vague rumours of casual or meditated insurrections in parts of the European provinces of Turkey. It is uncertain whether the Turkish Bulgaria would be a probable civil war between the Mahometans and the Christian population. If the Turks were expelled from Constantinople itself, their absence would not be prejudicial either to good government or to commerce. It is to the extension of Russian dominion that English Governments have hitherto objected; and it is not a cause for rejoicing that the present circumstances of Europe offer no inducement to territorial cupidity to the East. The usual symptoms of ambition and intrigue are displaying themselves in various quarters. An almost unintelligible revolution in the Principalities has placed a Prussian Prince upon the throne. Russian journalists are inviting the Americans to prove, by the seizure of some Greek island, there is no Monroe doctrine for Europe; and it is said that Prince Gortschakoff's health requires the air of Biarritz. Count Bismark mysteriously hints to the House of Deputies that the affairs of the East may cause a demand for money and armaments, and as he at the same time throws doubts on the sincerity of the Austrian reconciliation, it is probable that he may contemplate alliance with Russia. The French Minister for Foreign Affairs, before his recent departure from Constantinople, seems to have regarded with jealousy the designs of Russia. The Cretan insurgents, or their Greek advocates, affect to rely with equal confidence on the patronage of all the rival Powers. One enthusiastic pamphleteer appeals in successive paragraphs to the Emperor Napoleon, to the Emperor of the French, "the tutelary genius of nationalities," and to the Philhellenism of the country which produced Canning, Palmerston and Sir Edmund Gladstone." If replies of selfish ambition were once sincerely renounced, it might probably be the interest or duty of Europe to encourage the efforts of Christian insurgents in Turkey; but at present it is difficult to believe that any of the aggressive Governments are influenced by genuine regard for the welfare of the population. Twenty years ago the peace of the world had for more than one generation been secured by the determination of the Great Powers to maintain the actual distribution of territory. Should time the validity of international compacts has been rudely impeached, and the federation of the Five Powers has been dissolved. Its last work was the Peace of Paris concluded in 1856, and the changes which have since taken place on the Continent have diminished in many respects the security for peace. The formation of great national Powers in Italy and Germany, although highly beneficial to those who were immediately concerned, has supplied a plausible precedent for political innovation. France boasts that she has destroyed the Treaties of 1815, and Russia already hints that the compacts of 1856 are not more binding than the arrangements of Vienna. The logic of ambition is fertile in convenient sophisms. From the undoubted proposition that justice and national welfare sometimes require a disregard of positive institutions and domestic rights, it is easy to deduce the invalidity of national obligations, and the paramount claims of irresistible force. Because Germany and Italy have preferred unity and independence to the obsolete provisions of the Treaties of Vienna, Russia threatens to repudiate the price which was paid in 1856 for the completion of an indispensable peace. As soon as the scheme of conquest is matured, there will be no difficulty in finding a cause of quarrel with the destined victim. In 1853 France and Russia involved Europe in war, because two hostile gangs of riotous fanatics had, according to their custom, been fighting in Palestine for the possession of some idolatrous trinkets. An opportune insurrection in Bulgaria or Roumelia would furnish a more plausible excuse for intervention than the barbarous squabbles of the Greek and Latin Churches at Jerusalem. The insecurity of Turkish dominion deserves little sympathy, and it inspires even less, if possible, than it deserves. The Ottomans first taught their neighbours the use of standing armies, and the lesson has borne abundant fruit. Alone among the nations of Europe, England is still unwilling to admit that fighting is the principal business of mankind, or that the benefits of peace ought habitually to be sacrificed to the possibility of war. It is the absence of a conscription in Great Britain which renders Russia and French and German indifferent to English wishes and remonstrances; and it now seems that even a conscription is inadequate to satisfy the demands of the modern Moloch. The Eastern question may perhaps like other embarrassing problems, eventually receive some comparatively decisive solution. For the present it seems to be dependent exclusively on the force which may be available for purposes of selfish ambition.—Saturday Review.
